I have lived in Portland for the last 25 years. I moved here from the east coast where clothing and jewelry manufacturing dumped toxics into rivers and air. I moved to Oregon because of it's beauty, nature and clean air and rivers. I live in North Portland, not far from the most toxic river in the state. We have been exposed to cadmiums from Bullseye, lead in our water (I'm a PPS school teacher) and of course whatever else may be spewing into the air from the waste water treatment facility in North Portland. Shame on you for putting off in cleaning up these superfund sites! Shame on you for waiting, shame on you for helping to make Portland a LESS livable city, in spite of the growing population who continue to move here. I no longer feel proud to say "I live in Portland". I still see people fishing out of the Columbia slough. Can you believe that? It's sad, and many of these people do not speak English. There may be financial reason that have to fish there. Clean up the super funds and stop giving preferences to corporations!! Put the people and their health first. You probably don't even live here.
